A joint meeting of ACCESS member societies with

Dr. Linda B. Spurlock

Director of Human Health, Cleveland Museum of Natural History

Scientific Illustration and Sculpture: A diversity of subjects from Ardi to Zoology

Spurlock will explain how she became a scientific illustrator and her interest in the natural world and in forensics. Examples of her drawings and forensic facial reconstructions will be provided. Hear the tale of the reconstruction of the Ardipithecus ramidus (Ardi) skeleton. Ardi, and its place in the story of human evolution, was selected by Science magazine as the most important scientific discovery of 2009.
